

National Faith-Based Disaster Service Organizations

Although national faith-based organizations are usually the primary disaster relief and short-term recovery providers, their contributions to disaster response are as varied as their spiritual practices. They also are critical in organizing and funding the long-term recovery coordinated by Long-Term Recovery Organizations (LTROs). Below is a list of most of the national organizations that every LTRO and religious leader should have at their finger-tips.

The agencies listed are for your reference and potential collaboration. They represent most of the national faith-based response organizations, many of which are active members of national, state and local VOADs (*=National VOAD Member). All houses of worship should, if applicable, affiliate with their designated NVOAD agency and/or a local VOAD or disaster interfaith, disaster chaplain service or recovery committee.
